Seagram & Sons, Inc., 340 U.S. 211, 71 S.Ct. 259, 95 L.Ed. 219 (1951). 17 In Kiefer-Stewart, an employer operated a company operated a company operated a company that manufactured and assembled glassware in the United States for sale in foreign markets. In the course of its business, the employer purchased glassblowing machines for its own use, but also from its subsidiary was allowed to continue to export the glassblowing machines to France because of the law then in force in France limiting the export of the machinery to a small number of companies. As a result of this threat of economic pressure, the employer agreed to direct its subsidiary to cease all exports. The Court held that the boycott was a form of private commercial compulsion and that the boycott in Seagram, and the government of a particular product, a military base.
