Build a reputation in Harmond International, the corporate brand behind the world's most respected mobile gaming companies. You work for a shadowy corporation that has vast resources and the potential to change the world, but they still operate out of the shadows. You must venture into dangerous infected zones to go undercover, recover missing data and prevent the organization's plans from coming to fruition. Every location has a unique layout and a matching theme, from viruses infecting spaceships to refrigeration systems that freeze perfectly healthy people.People living in Liceo Di San Marco, Naples, Italy. (TOBIAS SCHWARZ / AFP) The Italian school system has just introduced the equivalent of the SATs for pre-university exams. By alternating between mathematics, grammar, language, and other subjects, schools aim to make a test that every pupil has to pass to get into university. The test is to be introduced next September, as part of a new "merit-based entry system". The "merit-based" system has been initiated for the 47,000 places in university courses for 2018/19, but it is now being expanded across the whole of the school system. Students will sit the test in early September, in groups of 1000, and afterwards they will have between one to eight weeks to study for it. The assessment will include two-hour written exams that last from September to December. The students will have until the summer term of next year to study for the "mid-year test", which will focus on English, maths and grammar. The deadline for studying for this is 13 December, and a student has just five weeks to complete all the necessary assessments. Some test materials will be lent out at universities, but a lot of the work will be carried out on the students' own computers. The results of the mid-year test will not be included in the final university entrance exam, which will assess the student's performance in the remaining subjects. This means that the newly introduced system will be far more stressful for students than the current model. Some universities, such as the leading London School of Economics, have started to teach their undergraduates to use a kind of "mental calculator", to
