What's new:

(2006) The soundtrack to Angus Currie's 2006 independent film Airborne Kingdom was released in the year of the film's release and where the musical emphasis seemed fully in line with the material of the film. Angus Currie's imaginative, highly personal experience was one of many visual and subjective representations we had received where a new form of politicized art had begun to manifest. The soundtrack was presented to us as a highly playful and fabricated communication. The soundtrack itself was set up in contrast with the experimental and marginalized visual readings of the scenes of the film in a clear rejection of the more whimsical, superficial criticism and chic aesthetics. The thematic balance between ambient, ambient forest, insect and vernacular vocal performances and electronics assembles a set of disparate sonic spaces rich in variety and originality. Although originally promoted by Royal de Luxe Records, the full 18 track scope was never made widely available as their resources were exhausted. Although simply created for the slightly out-of-the-way project, the soundtrack was eventually offered by hand and printed on directly applied vinyl through Airborne Kingdom itself. One is not in a position to determine the exact price or the effort required to procure it, but Angus Currie very generously granted me a copy for my web journal Parasite #39 and indicated that he would also announce the release of these tracks to the proper music journals. Up until now, Airborne Kingdom [DVD] is available only on limited as well as, until now, unavailable counterfeit copies. The release also included a number of previously unreleased pieces by Gordon Lamont called "Full Moon". This track was the official unofficial soundtrack release which contained all the cues (in two parts). This release contains previously unreleased tracks from Gordon Lamont's demo tapes of 1992 - 1995. This is considered as a bonus pack as it is thought that the bulk of the mystery tracks cut by Gordon Lamont has likely been very difficult to locate and is thus not reliably available. All information about the soundtrack comes from the artist and tape supplier and the participating friends Gordon Lamont, Brake Sax, Jeremy Druker and Angus Currie. - Various Art Informations/16.1.2007 ASP

Read all the official rules in the translated rulebook, please. (rulebook-hds.pdf) A bit of a forewarning This is not actually a SciFi Strategy, it's a strategy game with SciFi elements. Which means that the game follows the formula of turn-based strategy games and contains all known elements from the genre. The word SciFi comes in the description because of all the SciFi elements (e.g., art style, sounds, music and other gameplay elements, social aspects, etc.) of the game. Why I made this A long time ago I played Sid Meier's Colonization and thought to myself "Oh, that's a clever game, but it doesn't feel like a true strategy game". The other thing I thought was "Oh, that looks nice but it doesn't feel very strategy-like, it's just like playing the Sims". If you are the same person that thought that I was, you're now probably thinking: "Oh, that sounds like a nice game, but it's just like playing another strategy game where you have to build things." So what I made was the SciFi version of Colonization and I think it turned out better than expected. The game has a unique art style,
