In Need for Speed: Most Wanted, players must take full control of either an Underground Police Car.Q: Check for null before assigning an object in Java For some reason, the compiler doesn't like this assignment: String str = null; int x = str.length(); The error is: Syntax error on token ",", delete this token However, if I do this instead: String str = null; int x = (str != null)? str.length() : 0; It works fine. I'm assuming I'm doing something wrong and that there's a better way to do this check. Can someone point out my error in the first statement please? A: String str = null; int x = str.length(); is equivalent to String str = null; int x = (str == null)? 0 : str.length(); which means int x = (str.length() == 0)? 0 : str.length(); which is wrong because str.length() returns a final int.
