You should just offer the best gift without having the whole thing in your head beforehand. Think of it this way: with your presenting experience you know what you are going to give, you know your recipient and what they love to have and you have a crystal clear vision of what's important. When it's all in your head, you could be setting yourself up for failure and not delivering the gift you've prepared. 3. For all three gift settings, the longest joy is the one that lingers. How does this all tie together? If you were to share your long term joy with your best friend in the moment, you'd find it was even sweeter than the first
